

The Roundtable is Coming to Seattle!

The WA State Food Systems Roundtable is taking our vision for a sustainable food system across Washington. We each have a part to play and our role is significant. We are traveling around the state to a town near you to make sure you have the chance to shape the vision and consider what it will take to pull it off.

We know that a thriving food system provides many benefits - access to healthy, affordable and culturally appropriate food, economic security to growers, farmworkers, processors, distributors, and other food related business owners and employees, and protections to the environment to sustain ecosystems for future generations.

Our draft Prospectus - full of goals, strategies, and actions - intends to serve as a roadmap to guide our collective action in order to make the connection between food production, natural resources, personal and population health, economic vitality and social equity. We are keenly aware the devised vision, goals, strategies and actions need to align with multiple interests, address potential conflicts and have collective "buy in" to transition to real action.

Please join us in creating a sustainable food system for Washington that maximizes benefits for all – people, the environment, and the economy.
